Team Expectations Agreement[1]

When working in a team, problems occasionally arise. One source of problems is the differing expectations of team members. For example, one person may think that an email response should come within 2 hours, while another may think that 2 days is acceptable.

In this tutorial, your team will work on establishing team expectations. In the space below, write down the list of agreed upon guidelines that your team intends to follow. Include guidelines for the following:

- methods of communication (email, phone, messenger, text, . . .)
- communication response times (email, phone, messenger, text, . . .)
- meeting attendance (when to meet, whether all meetings are mandatory, . . .)
- running meetings (when, where, face-to-face vs. online, who takes minutes, . . .)
- meeting preparation (whether preparation is needed, what to prepare, . . .)
- version control (what to/not to commit, content of log messages, . . .)
- division of work (how to divide work, who will decide who does what, . . .)
- submitting assignments (when to submit, who will submit, who will review the submission, . . .)
- contingency planning (what if a team member drops out, what if a team member consistently misses meetings, what if a team member is academically dishonest, . . .) We suggest that in these cases, a team promptly seeks help from the instructor. It is important not to let such situations escalate.

The list above is just meant to get you started. If you had any team problems in the past, think about what went wrong and how expectations can be set to prevent those types of problems.

The main method that we are going to communicate is in the Discord server

You should respond to message by at most 24h later

We will meet at least once a week to discuss what we worked on recently, and what to work on in the next week (or duration until next meeting). This will be done via a Discord Call

Whenever committing, make sure testing is done before pushing

For the most part, people will work on the parts suited to their expertise. Although, if workload is too much or too little for one group, people will be reallocated for balance

Try to give some notice if you know you are not able to work for some duration. Otherwise, an abrupt event will be dealt by the remaining members.
